

Supporting the language(s) of schooling - The ROADMAP

TRAINING

Project INFO

Supporting students to master the language(s) of schooling is key for their successful learning. The ROADMAP team offers activities based on the whole-school approach to help participants understand the various dimensions connected to the language development of all students. The aim is to support academic development in all school subjects and to set up a school development plan.

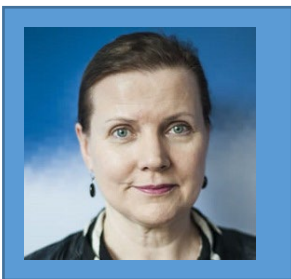

ECML experts for the event

Nermina Wikström, Sweden

Nermina Wikström works as Director of Education at Swedish National Agency for Education. She has extensive knowledge of language rights' issues of minorities, policy-based decision making and legislation processes as well as of curriculum and syllabus design, development and nationwide implementation. Her work includes the minority and heritage languages within the compulsory education and the Sami schools of Sweden. Her international experience also includes cross-national cooperation on curriculum, mother tongue and indigenous education issues.

Katri Kuukka, Finland

Katri Kuukka works as a counsellor of education in Finnish National Agency for Education. Her work includes the development of education and learning of immigrant learners in general education, developing the area, and giving support for the implementation of the national core curricula. Part of her work is implementing in-service training for teachers and head teachers in linguistic and cultural diversity and leadership issues.
